The Assembly met on Monday. In the bureau to examine the budget for 1852, it was discovered that the assimilation of the floating debt has increased it to the sum of seventy-one millions francs within the past year. This afforded a subject of general conversation and apprehension in the political circles. Various suggestions were made for means to increase the receipts. This having been made known, it had considerable effect on the Paris bourse. Seventyfive's were selling at 94f.24c., and seventy-three's

You must not infer from this, however, reader, that we got into a drinking crowd. The two hotels in Rockingham are kept by Sons of Temperance, we believe, and we did not see a drop of spirits drank in any house that paper of the 20th instant, says: while there. We recollect two or three of the stories .-One was of a newly elected constable, who had an execution to levy on a bull, and who some how or the latter, and the result was a decrease of one-third other, got it into his head that it was necessary to lay in the number of hogs, and a large decrease in weight. the paper on the bull's back. Accordingly, he got as Another reason for the deficiency may be found in near his bullship as possible, without exciting suspi- the fact that the whole western country is engaged cion, and attempted to lay the paper on him. The bull, however, was not to be caught so, and just as the biped was chuckling over the all but successful execution of his levy, away went the quadruped with tail crect, thus proving that "the best laid schemes of mice and-constables-gang aft astray." Away went the bull, with the constable in the rear, across old fields, through briar patches, over fences, down into ent season they have been drawing their supplies of hollows, up on to hill tops, helter skelter, their course was onward if not upward. Right straight across the country did they run for four long miles, until they came to a large mill pond. Into this dashed the bull, with the law's officer at his heels. If four legs had the advantage on land, it seems two had the advantatage in the pond. The constable swam up to the bull, laid the execution on his back, and then swam out and Another officer had a precept against a man, and got it into his head that it was absolutely necessary that he should read it over before he had done his duty. Accordingly, he went up to the man, told him he had such a paper, and commenced reading it. The man, not having a taste for such literature, and not being burdened with what some people call politeness, To New York commenced sliding off and made sundry motions as though he wanted to leave; to all which motions the To Baltimore officer put an end by knocking the man down, jumping To Great Britain astraddle of him, reading the instrument, and remarking that now that he had him down, he would make To New York him stand until he had got through with his business. Another officer went to levy on the contents of a smoke house. All the family were from home, and To Baltimore the smoke house was locked. However that building To Great Britain had very large cracks in it, and withall of rather small dimensions, so that it was but a short way from the circumference to the centre. The officer got a long rod, and armed with this in one hand and his execution in the other he approached the smoke house. He first read over his execution in the presence of the smokehouse and its contents, and then, reaching his rod through the different sides of the house, he touched each particular piece of bacon, remarking as he did, "I levy on you." Having gone through this operation he went home, perfectly satisfied that he had done his duty in full.

These stories brought to our recollection one that was told of an officer who used to flourish about the time and place of our boyhood. His name was Johny McIlwee. In that country they have a legal instrument which they call a "summons," commanding the person against whom it is issued to be and appear before a certain magistrate, at a certain time, to answer Georgia, on the 19th. The Falcon also sailed on the

Now according to the practice prevailing there-we cannot say whether it is law-the officer must serve it on the person against whom it is issued, if he be not comeatble, upon any one of mature age who may live at his house. The day came round on which Jackson ought to have appeared before the magistrate, but no Jackson appeared. The magistrate took measures to get the man before him, who, when there denied that ever such paper had been served upon himself or a responsible member of his family.

"Johny McIlwee," queried the magistrate, "did you serve Jackson in a legal manner?" "He was not at home, your Honor; but I served it on one of his family." The magistrate then asked if he was of Corn, 15,576 bushels-almost 130 bushels to each mature age. "Is it mature age, yer Honor? In this town, on the 25th inst., by Jac. L. Conserv. Esq., Mr. Daniel. Bayes, of Ouslow, to Many A. Potaten, of this place. THE M. F. G. WOYDER. H. M. P. C. WOYDER. I. W. DIED. In New Hanover county, on the 13th inst., at the residence of Davin R. Gornto, Mr. Isaac Simmons.

The object of this oblivary notice is two-fold: first, to warn—second, to encourage. The deceased, we presame, had some early religious training, as he was baptized infancy; but unfortunately, he contracted the habit of intemperance: he remained a poor, useless incbriate through the greater portion of his his—respected, loved, and obeyed only by a lonely boy—his only son. Though low, degraded, and forsaken, he was not beyond the reach of associated power to reform, and the grace of God to save. He was induced to join Topsail Tent of the Independent Order of Rechabites;—he broke his pledge and fell, but the "fraternal tie" was around him—a brother's heart felt—a brother's eyo wept—a brother's arm supported—he was again reclaimed, and kept his pledge while he lived. His constitution was rained; his means of support failed—wretchedness was surrounding him—but the liberal hand of our Order supplied his wants and made him comfortable. Nor did the grace of God fail. When sobered, he saw himself a vile sinner—he was led to repentance, and pointed to Him who is the propitiation for the sin of the whole world. He died reconciled to God, and was buried with the honors of the Order of Rechabites.

Let the poor incbriate hope to reform—be is cared for—

MARRIED.
